Up in the Air—That Goes Double —She Goes Single

1

OH, WHOA, Ruth—sit up and—Mon Dieu, Ruth, where in Hell-in-a-hand basket is the Boy Friend, exactly worst of his period flown to, at this hour, Ruth—Okay, I'll be! He'd better show up!

2

WHIZZ! WHIRR! He stood her up, he threw her down, that's obvious, so she hops off, a stranger in a strange airship—

3

THE ALIBI. He has his girls. The prima donna got wise, tipped the whole army of gendarmes, they chased him. He got to the wrong flying field, and reached the right one just in time to see his heart leave the ground. NOW how can he find her? And he MUST—she has no money, and—

Runaway Ruth

THE PATTERSON GIRL

by Russell Patterson

1 HOME! Some Boy Friend. Ruth sailed alone. Old Life Herself looks good. But there's that mysterious steward again, always with his face muffled up—what's he all about?

2 SERVICE! All the boys scrambled to help Ruth with the luggage, but up rushed that ubiquitous steward and took charge of her.

3 THE PAPERS! As he slipped her into a cab he slid a note into her hand—it read: "Leave your address at General Delivery—and be CAREFUL!" Careful of whom? What?

4 MISSING! And right on the front page she reads that she has "disappeared." She had neglected to notify her folks of her European departure. What to do now?
